

Class Starts April 30th or May 2nd.

Earn 1 or 2 graduate level credits from Ashland University.

Behavior and Social Skills Intervention for Children with Autism

Denise Eslinger (LPCC-S; NCSP), and Nicole Gerami (Speech/Language Therapist), will be teaching two classes through Ashland University.

The classes are geared for anyone working with children on the spectrum (teachers, special education directors, counselors, speech/language therapists, administrators) and interested in learning about Autism and how to successfully work with students. This is an introductory level providing hands on applications directly working with ASD's. You will be applying what you learn. These classes will introduce the most recent research and data on autism, what works, and what doesn't. You will learn about the latest best practice applications, and be provided actual field experience with hands on field experiences and the opportunity to enhance your skills directly with children on the spectrum ages 4 (preschool) through High school.

In these 4 days you will be provided the unique opportunity to step outside the classroom and put into practice the experiences and insights of what you need to know in dealing with this population of children.
